PREFACE

THE purpose of this book is to trace the direct ancestors of Annie Libby Burrows back to their emigration to America. In order to do this the genealogy of the wife of each generation of Libby's must be traced as well as the male line. The book is constructed according to the historical sequence of the genealogies. As an example, the ancestry of Esther Hanscom Libby, earliest wife of whom anything is known, follows the Libby record. Next comes the genealogy of Joanna Jose, wife of David Libby, 3rd. This sequence is followed down to the parents of Annie Libby Burrows.

At the end of the history of each ancestor is given a list of children. The name of the child next in line of descent to Annie Libby is capitalized in the list and his history immediately follows. If the descendants of any of these children have intermarried with other branches of the Libby line or with an ancestor of William French Burrows, Annie Libby's husband, their names are also capitalized and appear elsewhere in the book or in the Genealogy of William French Burrows.

Because information of the early American Libby ancestors is taken from published records, only the history of the direct line is given here until the record comes to more recent times. Information later than the beginning of the nineteenth century has also been accumulated from family bibles, tombstones, memory, and other unpublished data. Consequently in order to have a more complete permanent record of this type of information, the histories of all the children in the later lists have been given in more detail.

LIBBY

The Libby family has always been associated with the vicinity of Maine near Portland, where several locations have taken the name: as the Libby River, a stream on the land owned by the first John Libby, now in Scarborough; Libby Hill, site of the homes of David Libby and his brother Matthew, sons of John, in that part of Kittery, now Eliot; also Libby's corner near Portland.

JOHN LIBBY b. England about 1602. Came to America in employ of Robert Trelawny, who had trading and fishing station at Richmond's Island. In employ of Trelawny for four years 1635-1639. In 1677 stated he had been in America 47 years, probably a slight exaggeration. Sent for his wife probably 1640 and settled in Scarboro, on land between what is now called the Nonesuch River and a smaller stream called the Libby River. Described as "planter" in document dated January 1663. He was for many years one of the town's principal "planters." History of Scarborough. Constable, 1604. Selectman, 1669. In Philip's War suffered in common with other inhabitants, lost all except plantation. In 1675, on account of Indians, all people living at a distance from the garrison were compelled to leave their houses. The diary of Capt. Scottow, Sept. 7, 1675, (in charge of Boston Soldiers under whose protection crops had to be gathered) stated "the enemy burnt also eight or nine deserted houses belonging to Libby children." In 1676 Black Point Garrison was deserted and most of inhabitants fled to Boston. John Libby and family were in Boston 1677. Probably returned soon after as Peace terms were ratified 1678. "In few remaining years of his life acquired a comfortable property." Married (1) in England, name of wife unknown. She was mother of all the daughters and all but two sons. Married (2), Mary—who appears in the town grant of May 1, 1686 as of "Mary Libby's marshes."

LANE

"The Lanes may be called the military family of Buxton."

CAPT. JOHN LANE, b. Limmerick, Ireland, February 5, 1653, emigrated to New England while a young man. March, 1675, was soldier in King Philip's War under Capt. Poole; 1692, when he married in Newbury, Mass., he was Mr. John Lane, ten years later he was called Capt. John Lane, and so afterwards. "The fact that the title Mr. so sparingly used is prefixed to his name in the records, shows he was a man of distinction." November, 1692, married JOANNA DAVISON (also spelled Johannah Davinson) of Newbury, daughter of DANIEL and ABIGAIL (COFFIN) DAVISON. December 10, 1699, John Lane of Newbury gave a deed of land to John Frost of the Isles of Shoals: about 1708 Capt. John Lane is mentioned among the brave men of the garrison, afterwards served as Capt. in Province of Maine. Before his military appointment he had settled in Hampton, N. H.

"At Georgetown, Me., August 12, 1717, several Indian sachems asked that Capt. John Lane or some other person be chosen to deal with them in the room of one in whom they had lost confidence." 1717 Commander at Fort Mary, Winter Harbor near Biddeford at mouth of Saco River where he died and was buried about 1720.

Children of Capt. John and Joanna (Davison) Lane:

Living; b. Newbury, Mass.

Mary and probably Jabez and other children whose names are lost.

At the York Institute, Saco, may be seen quaint articles that belonged to the military members of the Lane family. There is a long powder horn upon which the name "Brimfield" is carved, said to have been brought from Ireland by the first Capt. John Lane, and a pocket book carried through the Revolution by Capt. John Lane of Buxton.

CAPT. JOHN LANE (2), b. Hampton, N. H., March 1, 1701-2. Moved with parents to Winter Harbor and finally resided at York, Me. He entered military service early under his father, was a lieutenant at various places in Maine and became famous fighting the Indians. Was in command at St. Georges in 1743, when he was recommended by prominent men as a suitable person for captain of one of four companies to be raised in Maine. He had command of Fort Halifax and was living at St. Georges in 1744. m. about 1733, MARY, daughter of PETER and SARAH (WEARE) NOWELL of York, Me.

From his petitions we learn that he was at Somerset when the Indians were killed there; at the battle with Indians at Norridgewock and "when the province granted bounties for scalps, he was out all the winter of 1744-5 after the St. John Indians." Was Captain of a company in expedition against Louisburg where he was the first man wounded and after the surrender was mustered out in June 1745, and taken to Boston where he was sick and not able to serve again until April, 1746, when he was given command of a company on the eastern frontier. He suffered a relapse and did not recover for many months, being at his home in York with his wife and three small children, suffering from sickness and poverty so that in February, 1748, he received 7 pounds from the General Court; again in April, 1749, the Legislature voted 5 pounds for his relief and December 7, 1749, 4 pounds. In the war against the French and Indians, the Indians burned his house. He was in Boston April, 1756, with a company of Biddeford men and served in the expedition against Crown Point. But a return of this company, dated October 11, 1756, reports Capt. John Lane Sr. as dead, and the command as devolving upon his son, John Lane, Jr. "It is supposed he died in the service of his country, at the age of 54 and was buried not far from Crown Point, Essex Co., N. Y.

Children of Capt. John (2) and Mary (Nowell) Lane:

Capt. John (3), b. York, Me. July 4, 1734, d. Buxton July 14, 1822. m. (1) Elizabeth (daughter of Wm.) Hancock, May 8, 1755. m. (2) Mrs. Hannah Haselton. m. (3) Hannah Bean.

COFFIN

TRISTRAM COFFIN, Governor and Founder of Nantucket, Mass. His father was Peter Coffin of Brixton, Devonshire, England; son of Nicholas Coffin of Brixton, who d. 1613. Peter Coffin m. Joan Thember or Thimber. "A long standing tradition has been proved to be incorrect. Mrs. Joan Coffin went to New England with Tristram and her daughter and d. at Boston, Mass., May 30, 1661, and from that time to the present, it appears to have been always understood that her maiden name was Thember. From the peculiarity of the name I was doubtful of the correctness of the tradition and, observing that persons of the name of Kember were then resident of Brixton, I examined the only two wills of that name. In will of Robert Keymber of Lower Hareston in Brixton are the words, 'Joane, my daughter, the wyfe of Peter Cawfing' followed by requests to Tristram and Joane, Peter's children." Dover Notes and Queries Vol. 2 edited by Amery-Amery and Rowe. Peter Coffin d. 1627-8.

"Tristram Coffin, apparently the eldest child of Peter and Joan Coffin, was baptised at Brixton March 11, 1609-10, seven days after his future wife Deanes (Dewynce, or Dionesse or Dionise), daughter of Robert and Dunes (Dewynce or Duence) Stephen (or Steven) of Ford in Brixton, had also been baptised there. Tristram's marriage had not taken place down to December 16, 1627 (the date of his father-in-law's will) but his son Peter was baptised July 18, 1630; and another son James, September 11, 1639." Dover Notes and Queries, Amery-Amery and Rowe, vol. 2. He came to New England 1642, living successively at Newbury, Haverhill, Salisbury and Nantucket. He was virtually King of the Island of Nantucket for he was granted a charter as Governor by the King of England and as such had full powers. He was "deposed" by the people who tired of his rather typrannical rule. STARBUCK

EDWARD STARBUCK, b. 1604, came from Derbyshire, England, to Dover, N. H., with wife Katherine (Reynolds) of Wales about 1635. Received land 1643, 40 acres on each side of Fresh River at Cocheco; other grants at different times; 1650 granted mill privilege with Thomas Wiggins. "He owned considerable land and was evidently a man of substance as to possessions as tradition says he was in body." Representative 1643, 1646; Elder in Church. He might have lived comfortably at Dover, but he became a Baptist; was fifty-five when he joined Thomas Macy in voyage from Salisbury to Nantucket, where he spent the winter; returning to Dover in the spring for his family who accompanied him to the island, with exception of daughters Sarah (Austin) and Abigail (Coffin) who had married and settled in Dover. "He was a leading man on the island and at one time Magistrate; described as courageous and persevering."

NOWELL

CAPTAIN PETER NOWELL came to York, Maine, from Salem where he had settled a few years earlier and followed the trade of blacksmith. Was second son of ROGER and MARY (Rosenbach) NOWELL; bapt. November 9, 1673, Falmouth County, Cornwall. Probably came to York 1695; attached to the garrison, as a "Sergeant Nowell" is mentioned 1696 in military records. At once began long life of real estate transactions on February 18, 1694-5, when he bought ten acres of land in Scotland, and in next forty-five years was party in seventy transfers of property. Selectman 1713 through 1717, 1720, 22, 24, 25, 28, 30; Deputy to General Court 1724; Moderator 1727 and 1739. 1724 Captain of Militia or "Minute Men" as they were called, doubtless serving before and after that time.

"Letter of Col. Thomas Westbrook, relative to Indian affairs in Maine, to Hon. Lt. Gov. Dummer:

'Enclosed is a copy of an impertinent letter from Mr. Peter Nowell, Representative of York, . . . asserting your Honour promised the men should be dismissed in convenient time to help put their seed into the ground.' " N. E. History and Genealogical Register Vol. 45, P. 134.

- m. (1), 1701, SARAH, daughter of PETER and MARY (PUDDINGTON) WEARE, by whom had ten children. m. (2) February 19, 1730, Mrs. Mary Preble, no children.

Inscription on tombstone of first wife formerly standing on Bragdon farm in Scotland.

"Here lies the precious dust of Mrs. Sarah Nowell, late virtuous consort of Capt. Peter Nowell a pattern of modesty and sobriety, Prudence and diligence Truth and faithfulness. Eminent for serious and undissembled Devotion in the Solemn Worship of God; Adorning her Profession by a blameless Faithful conversation, who departed this life in the well-grounded hope of a better, September 29, 1729, in the 53rd year of her age."

WEARE

Weare, Wier, Wyer, Wyre, Ware

PETER WEARE—precise date of his emigration not known; first appears as settler at Great Works, Kittery, about 1638; was then about twenty years old and came from Charfield, Gloucester. Probably son of Peter Weare of that parish and perhaps descended from a Thomas Weare, who was living there before 1500. (Note. It is quite probable, but not yet proved, that Nathaniel Weare, who came to Newbury, 1635, and later to Hampton, N. H., was a cousin or kinsman; both named sons Peter and Nathaniel and it is known the Hampton family came from same part of England). How Peter Weare became associated with Basil Parker, a London haberdasher, in the property at Great Works, is not known, but they were living there in June, 1640, and shortly after had confirmation of their land from Thomas Gorges.

He was employed in traffic of furs, then a lucrative business. Weare was called "of Gorgeana" in June, 1643, and henceforth until death resided in York. Lived first by present meeting house, but by 1650, acquired a lot on north side of Cape Neddick River, which became the Weare homestead for generations.

From this time forth Peter Weare became a leading citizen of the town and often a storm centre of politics.

From first identified himself with Massachusetts pretensions to ownership of Maine and was used by them to bolster their claims. Signed the Submission of 1652 and the petition to Cromwell, 1656.

In 1659 represented York in local legislature; again at Boston, 1660; was representative to important session of the General Court, 1665, during the controversy with the Royal Commissioners. In 1668 signed petition to Massachusetts to resume control of the Province. So obnoxious did he make himself to the lawful authorities of Gorges in this year that they imprisoned him in the town jail, "but at night the doors of the jail were staved in pieces by his confederates and he was set free."

The second military invasion of Maine in force was successful and Weare began to profit by his partisanship. He was commissioned as Recorder to the General Court; County Treas. 1670; Clerk of Writs 1665. For eighteen years Selectman, last time in 1683; 1654-1673 Town Clerk. "Although out of sympathy with his Provincial politics, the town recognized his abilities and his long service justified their confidence. He can be classed as one of York's most useful citizens in her early years of development."

m. (1) Ruth Gooch, daughter of John and Ruth Gooch, but she d. probably before date of her father's will, 1667.

m. (2) 1664, MARY PUDDINGTON, daughter of GEORGE and MARY (POOKE) PUDDINGTON, who had been his housekeeper, 1649-1663. She d. January 28, 1718-19. He was killed in the Massacre of 1692; estate valued at £570/2/10. Capt. John Davis was his wife's stepfather.

PUDDINGTON

GEORGE PUDDINGTON, son of Robert Puddington, clothier of Tiverton, Devon, and Jane, his wife; probably born about 1600. His father was owner of mills which burned, bringing him into financial difficulties shortly before death. Law suits were part of inheritance of his son, may have been reason for emigration of the brothers, George to Agamenticus (old name for York, Me.) and Robert to Portsmouth, sometime before 1640, the year both are found on the records. In will of Robert (father of George), the house on Brampton St., Tiverton, left to George.

m. Mary Pooke, St. Peters Church, Tiverton, February 5, 1630, her parentage unknown. Pooke, like Puddington, is a common name in Devon.

George Puddington's name first appears in list of aldermen and as deputy to the Provincial Court. Fined by Provincial Court for being tipsy. Brought with him to Maine, wife and children.

Purchased from Henry Simpson, 1640, the home lot where he settled and carried on business of innkeeper. "With a tavern license usually went license to sell liquor on the premises. First known tavern keeper in York was George Puddington, who in 1640, was landlord of an inn situated near the location of the present Sayward Hall." At his death widow continued the business. He d. between July 3, 1647 and June 5, 1649, aged about 50. Will dated June 25, 1647, but was not recorded for nearly half a century on account of lack of mention in it of a daughter Sarah. Will was not produced until necessity came to settle heirship after death of the mother. She m. (2) about 1659, Maj. John Davis and they continued the Inn. Maj. Davis d. 1691; she d. some years later.

ANDREWS

LIEUTENANT JOHN ANDREWS, b. probably in England about 1621. His ancestry, date and place of birth, time and manner of coming to America, unknown. May have been kinsman of Capt. Robert Andrews of "Angel Gabriel" and come to America with him. m. JANE, daughter of STEPHEN and SUSANNAH JORDAN of Ipswich and Newbury, Mass., no record of marriage found. He was soldier in war against Pequot Indians, 1637, for which was granted eight acres of land by the town of Ipswich. Was house carpenter and probably farmer; lived in Chebacco parish, now Essex, Mass., but exact place not known, supposed to have lived at one time at Belcher's Lane. In 1677 gave farm at Averill's Hill, supposed to have been near Belcher's Lane, to his son John and daughter Elizabeth Giddings.

In 1678 bought forty acres from John Cogswell, it being part of the Ipswich School farm; it is supposed he lived on this place perhaps many years. By deed of October 8, 1703, gave eight acres of land to his son John, called the place his homestead; it was in north part of Essex on south side of Choate Brook or Hardy Creek at the ancient Hoffield bridge, near north end of Belcher's Lane. John Andrews, Jr., sold the land to John Wainwright February 9, 1704, for 400 pounds and moved to Norwich, Connecticut. (Name of John Andrews frequently appears in records of Ipswich.) 1675 was on committee to lay out land near Ipswich; March 30, 1683, appointed Lieutenant to the 3rd Company at Chebacco.

The History of Essex, in a fanciful manner, thus refers to Training Day in old Chebacco. "You are particularly struck with the appearance of the officers as they stand in the front of the line. Lieut. Andrews in the military style of the day is dressed in red small clothes and red stockings with a profusion of gold lace upon his three cornered hat. You look upon the long line of men and see countenances of sturdy courage and manly sense with bodies of great muscular strength."

John Andrews "should be remembered for his patriotism and sturdy courage in resisting the arbitrary measures of Sir Edmond Andros, the Colonial Governor, in the town meeting of Ipswich on August 23, 1687, of which he was moderator."

In 1687 the governor and council ordered a tax of a penny a pound levied on property of the colony for the king's revenue. It was an arbitrary act, and in violation of the terms of the colony charter which provided colonists should not be taxed except by act of the General Court. An order was directed to the town officers of Ipswich to choose a commission to assist in assessing the tax in accordance with the order of the governor and council. John Andrews was chairman of selectmen and John Appleton was town clerk of Ipswich. It was decided at a meeting of the town officers held at Mr. Appleton's house to take the advice of John Wise, the minister of Ipswich, and "stand to their privileges." In town meeting next day it was voted not to choose a commission as directed and a report to that effect was sent to the governor. In response, a warrant was issued for arrest of Mr. Wise, Andrews, Appleton, Goodhue, Robert Kinsman and Thomas French; they were tried and found guilty of contempt and high misdemeanor and were imprisoned twenty-one days. All were fined, obliged to give bonds, and forbidden to hold office. Fine 30 pounds, pay costs, 500 pounds bond, (from account of John Wise). The town of Ipswich afterward made up the loss to those so prosecuted.

The action of these brave and courageous men on this occasion has been called "The Foundation of American Democracy." In commemoration of that event the seal of the town of Ipswich bears the following motto, "The Birthplace of American Independence 1687."

"During that horrible period of the Salem Witchcraft John Andrews again comes into public notice." With his four sons signed a petition drawn up by Rev. John Wise for clemency in case of John and Elizabeth Proctor, convicted for witchcraft in Salem. Proctor was born in Chebacco. By their act they opposed the intolerance and superstition of the Puritans of New England, represented and controlled by its clergy and magistrates, whose opposition was dangerous. Their acts were at the hazard of their lives. It required stout hearts for our ancestors to sign and present that petition at that time, more perilous in some respects than the resistance to the unlawful tax. John Proctor was hanged, but his wife was spared.

There were several persons named, John Andrews living in Ipswich and Chebacco between 1635-1708, making it difficult to identify them, but there was only one Lieut. John Andrews, who was the oldest living at Chebacco, and sometimes called Senior. It appears he was once called Corporal, but there was another Corporal John Andrews, son of Capt. Robert Andrews.

WINTER

JOHN WINTER, Scarborough, Me., 1638, lived chiefly at Richman's Island; sent out in 1632 by Trelawney and other fishermen of Cornwall to oversee their people; acquired large estate; "a grave and discreet man."

"John Winter, Mariner, of Plymouth, England, deserves to be honored as one of the most efficient and persevering pioneers who came forth from England in the seventeenth century. Intense in his connections, severe in his antagonisms, rugged in manners, he was yet deeply devoted to what he regarded as the principles of divine and human rights.

"Mr. Robert Trelawney, holding a patent for the island which had somehow received the name 'Richman' or Richmond Island, remained in Plymouth to receive whatever profits could be made from the land and water over which he had received control; but Mr. John Winter, who had passed the apprenticeship of years by which alone a man in those days could be termed 'mariner,' bade adieu to the easy life of home and sailed across the ocean, then so broad—and toiled at the head of a band of toilers. He not only superintended the fishing operations by which several ships a year were laden and sent home; he also looked to the cultivation of the soil on the island and ashore, training many men for their own farming, and making that island the nursery of Maine's grand husbandry and the pioneer ship yard of the state. More; he and Trelawney corresponded in a style that shows the good business habits of both; and the letters thus written form the first book of real history of the people of 'The Pine Tree State.' "Trelawny Papers" included in collection of Maine Historical Society.

John Winter received power of attorney with Thomas Pomery, January 18, 1631, and in summer of 1631 received possession of the Casco land and islands from Richard Vines. His letters, extant, begin July 11, 1633, but he had been here before, as we must infer from many notes in the letters and accounts. Year 1630 may be taken as probable beginning of Winter's operations on this coast.

Left his family in England at first; asked Mr. Trelawney to pay money to wife and to daughter, Mary Coulinge; referred to daughter Sarah. Mrs. Winter and Sarah came over in 1639. Drew on Trelawny June 15, 1642, for money to be paid daughter, Mary Hooper, to whom he wrote June 13, 1644; tells of marriage of daughter, Sarah, to Rev. Robert Jordan; mentions his son, John Winter, and tells of receiving letter from him on his return to England from East India. Inventory of estate October 10, 1648.

NOTES

NOTE I.

The expression "freeman" and the title "Mr." in early American records are explained by the following quotations:

"Under the first charter of Massachusetts Colony, none were regarded as freemen or members of the body politic, except as were admitted by the General Court and took oath of allegiance to the government here established."

Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England, Savage, Vol. 3, P. 89.

"The title Mr. so sparingly used when prefixed to a name in the records, shows he was a man of distinction."

Buxton Centennial, P. 200.

NOTE II.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

"The name and fame of the Honorable Artillery company of London were transplanted to Massachusetts soon after its colonization, by some of its members and a junior company was established in Boston, which is the oldest military organization on the American continent."

History of the Military Company of the Massachusetts. Now called The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts.

1637-1888, Oliver Ayer Roberts.
